Australia's trade account, September: Upside surprise on higher exports. Surplus, $12.4bn, previous $8.7bn. Exports +7.0%. Imports +0.4%.

Australia's trade surplus surprised to the high side for the month of September, led by exports. The surplus widened to $12.4bn up from $8.7bn for August (revised higher from $8.3bn).

Export earnings rose by 7.0%, +$4.0bn – in sharp contrast to our expectation for a flat result. Coal was not as weak as we anticipated, despite floods disrupting shipments, down by only $0.1bn. Fuels (dominated by LNG) rose by $1.8bn (there was uncertainty as to how this would land). Metal ores rose by more than we anticipated, up by $1.2bn, up on higher volumes. Service exports had another strong showing, up by 6.3%, +$0.4bn, benefiting from the national border reopening.

Imports were little changed, +0.4%, +$0.2bn – whereas we had anticipated a pull-back after the recent burst and we had allowed for lower global energy prices. While there was a fall in consumption goods imports (the correction we were looking for) the fuel import bill rose, not fell, and civil aircraft imports were also up. Core imports (ex fuel, ex aircraft and ex gold) fell in the month, down by 2.5%.

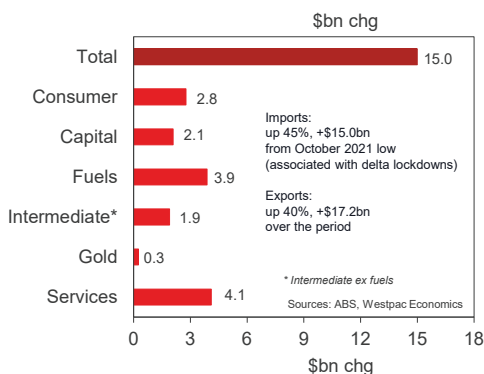

For the September quarter, Australia posted a still sizeable trade surplus of $30.2bn, down from a $43.7bn record high the quarter prior. This reflected a pull-back in commodity prices, on global recession fears, as well as a surge in import volumes.

The terms of trade declined by about 6% in the September quarter, we estimate, down from the June quarter record high when commodity prices spiked in part due to the Ukraine war.

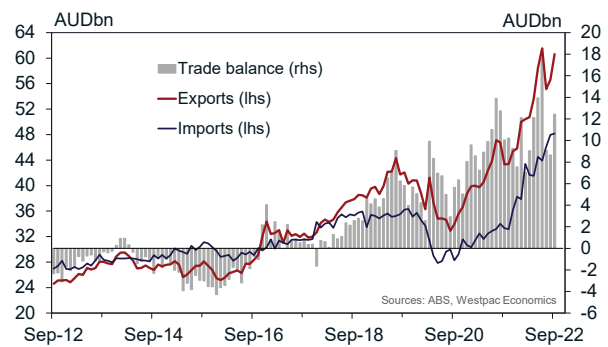

Real net exports have swung from a sizeable positive for growth in the June quarter, adding 1.0ppt, to a sizeable drag on activity in the September quarter. We were expecting a net export drag in the order of 0.50ppts for Q3, but on our preliminary figuring it may be closer to -0.75ppts. The surge in import volumes, an estimated 6.5% (goods 4.5% and services almost 17%) was greater than we allowed for. Export volumes advanced, up an estimated 2.8% (goods 1.6% and services almost 10%).
