MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Markets adopted a cautious risk-on tone, with investors treating the latest US-Iran strikes as another phase of managed escalation and remaining confident that crude flows from the Middle East will continue despite renewed tensions.

Equities advanced on renewed momentum in chipmakers, with the NASDAQ leading gains in the US, while the ASX 200 lagged.

US Treasuries advanced as easing oil prices reduced inflation concerns.

The USD softened modestly as markets looked through the latest Middle East escalation, while the NZD outperformed against the greenback as markets priced additional RBNZ tightening.

Oil prices reversed part of the previous session's gains, while Qatar indicated it would pause efforts to rapidly revive production at the world's largest LNG facility following attacks on its tankers in the Strait.

Financial Markets

Markets adopted a cautious risk-on tone overnight, with investors treating the latest round of US-Iran strikes as another phase of managed escalation. Oil prices moved lower, while attention shifted back towards the momentum in US chipmakers.

The US said it had conducted fresh strikes on Iranian targets, degrading Tehran's ability to attack commercial shipping in the Strait. Iran responded with missiles and drones targeting US bases in Kuwait, Bahrain and Qatar. Oil's advance subsequently stalled as markets remained optimistic that crude flows from the Middle East would continue despite renewed tensions, even as the US revoked a waiver permitting new sales of Iranian oil.

- In the US, equities were supported by a resurgence in chipmakers, with the S&P 500 gaining 0.8%. The tech-heavy NASDAQ rose 1.3%, while the Dow Jones posted a more modest gain of 0.3%. The VIX declined 6.3% as market volatility eased. European equities also advanced, with the Euro Stoxx 50 rising 1.3%, while the FTSE 100 lagged, down 0.2%.
- Asian equities rallied amid AI optimism and contained oil price gains. The Nikkei 225 rose 1.4%, while the KOSPI gained 0.6%. The Hang Seng underperformed, falling 0.7%. Locally, the ASX 200 declined for a fourth consecutive session, down 0.3%.
- US Treasuries advanced as easing oil prices reduced inflation concerns. The 2-year yield declined 4bps, while the 10-year yield fell 3bps. Futures markets continue to fully price an additional Fed hike this year, with December now seen as the most likely timing, taking the implied year-end terminal rate to 3.97%.
- Australian government bond yields were little changed, with the 3-year yield unchanged and the 10-year yield down 1bp. Swap markets remain unconvinced of an additional RBA hike, with the implied year-end terminal cash rate at 4.48%.
- FX markets traded in a relatively narrow range. The USD softened as markets looked through the latest Middle East escalation, with the DXY down 0.1%. The AUD gained 0.2% against the greenback to 0.6941, while sterling, the yen and the euro each rose 0.1% against the USD. The NZD outperformed, gaining 1.0% as recent data prompted traders to lift expectations for further tightening.
- Among the crosses, the AUD was little changed against the euro, sterling and yen, while declining 0.8% against the NZD.
- Commodity markets saw oil reverse part of the previous session's sharp gains as investors continued to view the latest strikes as managed escalation. Brent fell 2.3% to US$76.2/bbl, while WTI declined 2.0% to US$72.1/bbl, remaining well below the highs reached during the 'live' phase of the conflict. Elsewhere in energy markets, Qatar indicated it would pause efforts to rapidly revive production at the world's largest LNG facility at Ras Laffan following an attack on one of its tankers in the Strait.

- Gold benefited from the market's dismissal of a more serious escalation, rising 1.1%. Base metals also recorded notable gains, with copper up 2.5% and aluminium rising 2.2%, while iron ore declined 0.3%.

International Data

US initial jobless claims were broadly unchanged last week at 215k, consistent with a low level of churn in the labour market.

US existing home sales fell 2.4% in June, reversing most of May's 3.7% increase. Sales remain 38% below the cycle peak of 2021. Supply continues to be limited by elevated interest rates and uncertainty over the outlook.

Yesterday, China's headline and core rate of inflation stabilised around 1.0%yr as producer price inflation edged up to 4.1%yr. Weak domestic demand continues to limit the ability of Chinese firms to pass through production cost increases.
