MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

Escalating tensions in the Middle East continued to drive markets overnight, with attacks on Saudi energy infrastructure and US strikes on Iranian targets pushing WTI crude to a three-month high of US$93/bbl, reigniting inflation concerns.

Risk sentiment deteriorated as higher oil prices and rising yields weighed on equities. The S&P 500 fell 0.6%, the Dow Jones lost 1.2%, while European markets delivered a mixed performance.

Bond markets extended their sell-off, with the US 2-year Treasury yield rising to 4.39%. Markets are now pricing a roughly 60% chance of a Fed rate hike this month and more than 60bps of tightening by the end of 2027.

Australian rates remain under upward pressure following hawkish RBA communication. Markets now fully price another rate hike by year-end (consistent with Westpac Economics' updated rates outlook) and see almost an 80% chance of a follow-up move in March 2027.

Financial Markets

- There was a risk-off tone overnight amid rising hostilities in the Middle East and higher oil prices. Yemeni rebels attacked Saudi Arabian energy facilities, while US forces struck Iranian targets near Kharg Island. This pushed oil prices to their highest levels since early June, with WTI crude rising 1.7% to US$93.03 a barrel. The move added to inflation concerns, pushing bond yields higher and increasing the odds of further US rate hikes.
- In trade-related news, the EU and Canada are set to announce new trade and security ties, while Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney defended his latest tariffs on American goods, including US steel and a range of consumer products, arguing they are intended to protect Canadian businesses rather than escalate tensions with Washington.
- Key US equity indices declined overnight. The S&P 500 fell 0.6% to 7,674, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average also moved 1.2% lower amid higher bond yields and expectations of tighter monetary policy. The tech-heavy Nasdaq was relatively resilient, falling 0.3% on the day.
- European equities were mixed, with the Euro Stoxx 50 edging up 0.1%, France's CAC increased 0.2%, while Germany's DAX and the FTSE 100 were down 0.1%. Asian markets were weaker, with the Nikkei down 1.7% and the Hang Seng declining 0.4%. Locally, the S&P/ASX 200 fell 1.0% to 8,921. Equity futures are pointing to a modest rebound, with the SPI 200 up 0.2% to 8,924.
- The bond market sell-off continued overnight. The yield on the policy-sensitive two-year Treasury rose 3bps to 4.39%, while the 10-year Treasury yield increased 1bp to 4.79%. Traders are now pricing around 35bps of rate hikes by the end of 2026 and almost 60bps by the end of 2027. The probability of a US Federal Reserve rate hike this month is now around 50%.
- Australian bond markets were mixed. The 3-year government bond yield was unchanged at 4.78%, while the 10-year yield eased 1bp to 5.19%. On the back of hawkish RBA communication, futures softened slightly, with the 3-year futures yield rising 2bps to 4.80% and the 10-year futures yield increasing 1bp to 5.20%. OIS pricing continues to imply a cash rate near 4.70% by year-end, with markets now pencilling in at least one further rate hike this year, consistent with Westpac Economics' updated rates outlook.

Today's key data and events

Time	Event	Exp	Prev
5:00	US Consumer Credit Jul	US$11.9b	US$14.2b
11:30	CN PPI Aug	3.6%	3.5%
11:30	CN CPI Aug	0.8%	0.5%
-	CN M2 Money Supply Aug	7.6%	7.7%

Times are AEST. All data forecasts are m/m or q/q and seasonally adjusted unless otherwise specified. Forecasts for Australian data are our forecasts and for other countries they are consensus forecasts.

- In foreign exchange markets, the US dollar eased overnight, with the DXY falling 0.3% to 98.85. The Australian dollar was unchanged against the US dollar at US$0.7220. Against major crosses, the Australian dollar fell 0.3% against the yen and 0.3% against the Canadian dollar, while rising 0.4% against the New Zealand dollar. It was broadly unchanged against sterling, the euro and the Hong Kong dollar, and eased slightly against the Chinese yuan and Singapore dollar.
- Commodity markets were firmer overall. The CRB Index rose 0.8%, supported by gains across several key commodities. WTI crude oil increased 1.7% to US$93.03 a barrel. Copper rose 1.4%, iron ore gained 0.7% to US$100.20/t, and coking coal increased 1.1%. Gold fell 1.1%, thermal coal declined 0.6%, and ACCU prices fell 4.3%.
- Copper futures rose in part as buyers continued to stockpile inventories amid ongoing trade disruptions and supply outages. Copper's critical role in electrical wiring, power networks and infrastructure has also made it a popular proxy for investors seeking exposure to the AI boom.

International Data

US NFIB small business optimism edged down in August from 99.8 to 98.7, remaining modestly above the survey's 5-year average of 94.7.

US NY Fed 1-year inflation expectations edged down from 3.63% to 3.58% in August, below the average of the past 5-years of 4.08%.

US consumer credit bounced from $14.6bn in June to $18.1bn in July, against expectations for a decline to $18.1bn.

Yesterday, China's trade surplus widened further in August from $112bn to $119bn. Exports gained 25.0%yr while imports were up 28.2%yr.

Local Data

Westpac Economics now expects a rate hike in November due to the stronger than previously expected underlying inflation impulse. This, in turn, has been driven by more resilient household incomes and larger spillovers from the data centre boom (see here).

During her fireside chat at the AFR Property summit, RBA Assistant Governor Sarah Hunter noted that the data centre boom has surprised the RBA on the upside and was boosting domestic activity despite higher import penetration levels. When asked about rates, Hunter noted that the strong July CPI read was driven by domestic factors and the Board may have to raise rates if inflation is tracking above forecasts.

The Westpac–MI Consumer Sentiment Index declined 5.2% to 84.4 in September from 88.9 in August. The component detail shows a broad-based decline in September led by a pullback in current assessments of family finances. The fall takes sentiment back towards the deeply pessimistic levels seen earlier in the year. Both fuel prices and interest rates again look to be driving the move (see here).

Business conditions fell into negative territory for the first time in six years, declining 5pts to –1 and marking the weakest result since the height of the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020. Business confidence declined for a second consecutive month, falling 2pts to –8 and extending the reversal of the recovery that emerged from the conflict lows in March and April (see here).
