MORNING REPORT

Today's economic developments and market movements.

Key themes

It was a relatively quiet but nervy session in markets overnight. Clarity on the extent of the disruption surrounding Saudi Arabia's East-West pipeline closure is still lacking, though it is increasingly looking like it will last closer to weeks, rather than days.

Brent crude oil rallied back up to yesterday's peak above US$109/bbl, but has since settled 2.7% higher at around US$108.5/bbl.

Concerns over inflation risks from higher oil prices and a poor turnout for the 20Y auction added to the selling pressure for US treasuries, with the 10-year yield edging 1bp higher to close at 5.00%.

This comes ahead of the FOMC's policy decision later tonight, where markets and analysts are widely expecting a 25bp rate hike. Westpac sees a hike in September and a follow-up in Q4 as allowing for enough time for the underlying disinflation evident above to be reflected in other measures.

Financial Markets

It was a relatively quiet but nervy session in markets overnight. Clarity on the extent of the disruption surrounding Saudi Arabia's East-West pipeline closure is still lacking, though it is increasingly looking like it will last closer to weeks, rather than days. Reports of Saudi crude cargo shipment cancellations are adding to concerns around physical tightness in the oil markets, seeing prices remain around recent highs. That backdrop provided no let-up for the sell-off in global bonds, with yields continuing to push higher also.

This comes ahead of the FOMC's policy decision later tonight. Westpac sees the FOMC delivering a 25bp rate hike at this meeting. As discussed by Westpac's Head of International Economics in our September Market Outlook, the limited confidence market participants took from Chair Warsh's address and the immense volatility apparent in markets since necessitates a course correction. A hike in September and another in Q4 should allow time for the underlying disinflation evident above to be reflected in other measures. Acting now will also lean against any deterioration in expectations and the run higher in long-term yields.

- Share markets were in the red across the globe. In the US, the S&P 500 (-0.4%), Dow Jones (-0.6%) and NASDAQ (-0.8%) all declined ahead of the FOMC's policy decision later tonight, with higher oil prices and yields making for a nervy backdrop. The Euro Stoxx 50 (-0.4%) and FTSE 100 (-0.4%) also fell.
- Asian share markets were similarly weak: Hong Kong more than retraced yesterday's gain (-1.0%), Shanghai posted its fourth consecutive decline (-0.7%), while the Nikkei held broadly flat following some chunky declines over the past two sessions. The ASX 200 meanwhile dropped 0.9%, led by energy and miners, though futures markets suggest this morning's open could be a bit more positive.
- Treasuries continue to be sold off as higher oil prices add to concerns over inflation risks. A poor turnout for the 20Y auction also added pressure, seeing the 10Y yield rise 1bp higher to close at 5.00%, for the first time since 2007. This comes ahead of tonight's FOMC's policy decision, where markets have close to fully priced in a rate hike from 3.625% to 3.875%. Markets also see another 2-3 hikes beyond that through 2026 and 2027.
- Global yields generally edged higher too, following the US, with 10Y Bunds, Gilts and JGBs up 2-3bps. ACGBs meanwhile sold off fairly sharply yesterday, the 3Y up 9bps to 5.05% and the 10Y up 8bps to 5.42%. Swaps markets expectations for the RBA aren't much changed though – around a 70% chance of a September rate hike, but two full rate hikes priced in through to 2027 overall.

Times are AEST. All data forecasts are m/m or q/q and seasonally adjusted unless otherwise specified. Forecasts for Australian data are our forecasts and for other countries they are consensus forecasts.

- The USD continued to find a bid against this backdrop, the DXY up 0.3% to around 99.6. Most major currencies slipped against the greenback: the Yen down 0.5% and establishing a foothold back above JPY155, the Sterling sliding under USD1.35 to be near the lower end of the month's range, although the Euro held broadly steady at around USD1.154. The Aussie dollar meanwhile slipped only 0.1% to around USD0.713, also around the lower end of the month's range.
- Crude oil prices continued to build on yesterday's increase as markets become increasingly unnerved at the degree of physical tightness in the market, with Saudi Arabia's East-West pipeline closure looks more like it could last weeks rather than days, and reports of Saudi crude cargo shipment cancellations at a key port. Brent rallied back up to yesterday's peak above US$109/bbl, but has since settled 2.7% higher at around US$108.5/bbl.
- Metals were somewhat mixed, with LME copper partly retracing some of yesterday's decline with a 0.6% increase. Gold traded a fairly tight range and prices were little changed overall, hovering around the US$4,300/oz level.

International Data

In China, August's activity data was poor as expected. Annual growth in retail sales slowed to just 0.4% in August while the year-to-date decline in fixed asset investment accelerated from -6.7% to -7.2%, with property investment down 19.9%. New and existing home prices fell another 0.2% and 0.3% in the month, consistent with the trend of recent years. In line with consistent strength in trade, however, annual growth in industrial production accelerated modestly from 4.5% to 5.2%.

In the US, the Fed Empire manufacturing survey fell from 20.6 to 7.6 in September, below the market expectation of 15.0.

In the UK, the ILO unemployment rate was unchanged at 4.9% in July as expected. Employment was also in line with expectations at 66k in July, so too annual growth in average weekly earnings at 3.9%yr, down from 4.2% in June.
